Joshua MacAaron led a solitary existence, and believed he preferred it that way until the night he crossed paths with Catherine Mills. From the first, her innocent joy and strength invaded the most secret parts of his long-quiet heart. He felt inexplicably and irresistibly drawn to her, until at last he resigned himself to the fact that they were destined to meet. Still, he knew that the decision to involve himself with the young mortal could mean the end of his existence. Katie led a simple life, ruled by order and practicality. She had no time for romance, had never given it thought, until the night a stranger stepped into her life. Joshua's old-fashioned, Scottish mannerisms and extraordinary good looks awakened her heart to new and unknown yearnings. When she discovered that the man she learned to love was a vampire, she became torn between fear she couldn't control and an almost desperate longing.
